Fessenden Shirt Factory Marked for Air Pilots

First Building to be Marked in City Especially for Benefit of Passing Air Pilots Who Will Know What City They Are Flying Over—Letters 12 Feet High.

The Fessenden Shirt Company factory on Field Court is the first building in Kingston to be marked for the identification of cross country air fliers and the word "Kingston" with letters 12 feet in height have been placed on the roof of the building. The lettering is the work of C. F. Elmendorf of this city. The need of adequate and proper identification of towns and cities throughout the United States has led to a campaign being inaugurated by the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, Inc., of New York city, which has addressed a letter to every postmaster throughout the country asking that some action be taken. The work of lettering the roof of the Fessenden plant, however, had been considered by E. E. Fessenden, president of the company, before the letter from the Guggenheim Fund had been received by Postmaster Walter P. Crane.

Mr. Fessenden is a member of the board of public works and is chairman of the airport committee of that board. He is deeply interested in the subject, and believes that Kingston should take steps toward acquiring an airport. The Fessenden shirt factory makes an ideal site for placing a mark of identification for fliers as the building is almost centrally located in the city and is one of the highest buildings in that section of the city. The roof of the building is almost flat.

Lettering Meets Requirements.

The lettering done on the Fessenden roof by Mr. Elmendorf complies with the requirements of the Department of Commerce. The letters are twelve feet in height, and a space one-fourth the height of the letters is used between each letter. The letters are done in black against a background of the chrome yellow. Above the letters forming the word "Kingston" is painted an arrow with the letter "N" just over the tail of the arrow.

The letter from the Guggenheim Fund that was sent to Postmaster Walter P. Crane and turned over to Mr. Fessenden, states that the experience of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh during his United States tour last fall and subsequent cross country flying has caused him to stress to the officials of the fund the need of adequate and proper identification of towns and cities throughout the United States. In the opinion of Colonel Lindbergh, who is technical advisor of the fund, one of the most worthwhile steps that can be taken for the advancement of civil aviation is the identification of communities both large and small by roof markings. His opinion is shared by other pilots from coast to coast and has the emphatic endorsement of the leaders in aeronautics, government officials and directors of the Guggenheim Fund.

Lindbergh Will Send Certificate.

Some of the towns and cities of the country have already been identified by roof-markings, and Kingston is now so identified. Because the marking of a town is a very definite contribution to the advancement of aviation, the fund has asked Colonel Lindbergh to send to each town carrying out this work a certificate expressing the appreciation of those who are interested in the progress of aviation. This certificate, signed by Colonel Lindbergh and the president of the fund, will be sent to that organization or person responsible for the work of identification.

New York Plans For New Year

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—Mine host, whether in a Harlem night club or a smart midtown hotel, was making elaborate preparations today for the entertainment of father Knickerbocker and his guests New Year's Eve.

Cover charges in hotels, night clubs, restaurants and cabarets were high.

The increase in the fee charged for a seat, a noise-maker and a bag of confetti, was greatest in the Harlem clubs. It is the fad for white society folks to patronize clubs in this negro section. Popular Harlem clubs were putting cover charges as high as $25. Some of the so-called exclusive night clubs in the Broadway district too asked $25 for a seat but the clubs were content with a modest $10.

The celebration at the Waldorf-Astoria, which will tax the famous room to capacity, will be something in the nature of a farewell party, for neither New Year's will see the hotel razed.

There was some uneasiness among proprietors of certain clubs regarding what if anything the police, under their new militant commissioner, might or might not do.

Commissioner Whalen, however, announced no special policy for New Year's Eve.

Two Stages Mark Hoover's Trip to Latin Republics

Turned Unexpectedly Into Political Channels in Central America, While Economic Conditions Formed Base of Visit to South America—Internal Problems Met Without Comment.

U. S. S. Utah, Enroute to Hampton Roads, Dec. 31 (AP).—Herbert Hoover's good-will trip had two distinct stages, in the view of his associates on the mission: First, in Central America, turning unexpectedly into what might be termed political channels, and second, in South America, with economic conditions at its base, with questions of better relations with the United States overlying all.

During the very first call in Honduras, contending political factions were brought together at a reception with what was expected to be beneficial results, both sides promising that they would have more amicable relations. The same was true in Nicaragua, where political leaders met in a friendly manner, with Diaz and Moncada both going publicly on record as favoring the retention of American Marines, at least until the local constabulary could be organized and recruited full strength.

Throughout South America members of the mission were somewhat surpassed at the extent of American investments in the republics. They were informed that American capital was welcomed and that South America was looking to the United States for funds to assist in the vast development which is possible for each of those countries.

In Ecuador, President Ayora frankly discussed the problems of his country with Mr. Hoover, emphasizing the need for outside financial assistance.

Peru, one of the largest of South American republics, and regarded as unusually rich in natural resources, appeared especially eager to welcome American capital. President Leguia in his conversations with the President-elect stressed the need of better steamship connections, air lines and roads.

Bolivians, who boarded the Maryland at Antofagasta, discussed the road program but they also went into the question of the outlet to the sea, explaining the difficulty of bringing in supplies for the country.

Mr. Hoover listened but made no comment when political questions about internal problems in Central and South America were mentioned.

Better communications with the United States by sea and air, as well as economic conditions, formed the basis of conferences in Argentina and Brazil.

Induce Poincare To Stay in Office

French Premier Ready to Resign But Cabinet Persuades Him to Remain —Has Definitely Avoided a Crisis.

Paris, Dec. 31 (AP).—Premier Poincare today frankly told his cabinet that he had accomplished his main tasks and was ready to resign because of present unrest. But the cabinet persuaded him he had much to do, particularly in regard to reparations, and M. Poincare agreed to remain.

At the opening of the cabinet session Premier Poincare told his colleagues that he had reorganized the Armistice Day ministry in order to insure prompt adoption of the budget. This had been done before the end of the year and as stabilization of money was assured he felt his work was done.

The premier concluded by saying that in view of the complex political situation he would present the cabinet's resignation to President Doumergue.

All the ministers joined in convincing the premier that the government faces a grave problem in revision of reparations and adjustment of domestic political differences. They unanimously declared that Poincare's continuance as head of the government was "indispensable."

Poincare finally agreed to remain. Thus in the opinion of his supporters he definitely avoided a crisis and greatly strengthened his hand by compelling the whole cabinet, in which there was reported to be dissension, to insist upon his retention in the leadership.

President Plans To End Vacation

Expected He Will Leave Georgia Late Tuesday—Wild Turkey Shoot Arranged—Dedicates "Coolidge Oak."

Floyd's Neck, NewBrunswick, Ga., Dec. 31 (AP).—A wild turkey shoot on the mainland game preserve of Howard E. Coffin was arranged for President Coolidge today, and the chief executive left orders to be called at an early hour.

A breakfast at his host's hunting lodge on the preserve was next on the program, after which the presidential party expected to leave aboard Mr. Coffin's yacht Zapalla for St. Simon's Island, where the chief executive planned to dedicate the "Coolidge Oak."

When the famous old frigate "Constitution" was under construction, large quantities of oak timber were cut on St. Simon's Island and sent to the shipyard for use in the vessel's hull. The tree the president expected to dedicate today is said to have sprung from an acorn of one of the trees which furnished the Constitution timber.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and their hosts then planned to proceed on the Zapalla direct to Little Sapelo Island for pheasant shooting.

Mr. Coolidge yesterday attended services at historic old Christ Episcopal Church at Frederica on St. Simon's Island, the site of Charles Wesley's first sermon in America. He also viewed the ruins of Fort Oglethorpe, built by the English colonists for protection against the Spaniards.

The party then was taken aboard the Zapalla, and the journey started for Mr. Coffin's mainland hunting preserve.

President Coolidge spent the night in complete isolation. The Coffin hunting lodge has no telephone and was accessible by land only through a dense forest penetrated by a rough trail known only to a few experienced guides. At Mr. Coolidge's wish, the newspapermen who accompanied him to Georgia were not permitted to go to the hunting lodge.

It was learned last night that Mr. Coolidge's vacation among the sea islands off the south Georgia coast was rapidly drawing to a close, with tentative plans calling for the departure of the presidential train from Brunswick late Tuesday.

Fire Destroys Hudson Armory

Hudson, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP).—Fire broke out today in the New York State Armory here. The interior and furnishings of the building were expected to be a total loss and firemen summoned by a general alarm were battling to keep the flames from spreading to a large quantity of ammunition stored in the building.

About 6,000 rounds of machine gun ammunition were stored in the basement of the building, and several small explosions occurred, but firemen succeeded in keeping the flames from reaching the main portion.

Portions of the walls crumbled after the fire had been burning for several hours, and it was expected the building would be a total loss. It was erected in 1899 at a cost of $30,000, but its replacement value was said to be several times that amount.

The building was occupied by Company M, a machine gun company of the Tenth Infantry, New York National Guard. The records of the company as well as those of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who used the building as their headquarters, were saved.

The fire was discovered in the basement by Armorer Frank W. Macy when he opened the building and was believed to have been caused by overheating.

A Buffalo despatch states that a transfer to Albany, involving more than half the present personnel of the Buffalo district of the prohibition department was announced Sunday by Administrator Andrew McCampbell. The men will be sent to staff the recently organized headquarters there.

The transfer includes thirty-nine agents and thirteen inspectors. There are about seventy men attached to the Buffalo office. In their new office they will be under the direction of Palmer Canfield, former officer of the service who is returning to assume control of the new bureau. With them will go twenty-two girl employes, stenographers and clerks to complement the Albany department.

Local Plumbers Want More Money And Less Work

Mail New Wage Agreement for Master Plumbers to Sign—Want a 5-Day Week at $10 a Day—Now Work 44 Hours a Week at $9 a Day.

The local plumbers' union are seeking more money and less work, according to the proposed new wage agreement that has been mailed to the master plumbers of the city. The present wage agreement expires May 1. The new wage scale calls for a five day week at $10 a day. They now work 44 hours a week at a wage scale of $9 a day.

It is understood that the members of the local plumbers' union have been considering asking for a five day week for several months past, and it was said that they believed the wage scale should be $10 a day.

The new wage agreement is being mailed now to the master plumbers of the city so as to afford them time to study it, and it is expected that before any action is taken the master plumbers of the city will hold a meeting and discuss the proposed new wage agreement.

King's Exhaustion Presents Problem

General Condition Is Maintained and There Is More Readiness to Take Nourishment—Public Anxiety Continues

London, Dec. 31 (AP).—The exhausted condition in which King George's prolonged illness has left him is presenting a difficult problem to his physicians, which they frankly acknowledge in this morning's official bulletin.

Five of the seven principal doctors who have been attending His Majesty signed this morning's report, which was more detailed than recently. And although it recorded a rather disturbed night it announced some improvement in the king's appetite and said he is holding his own as to general condition.

The bulletin follows:

"The king has passed a somewhat restless night. His general condition is maintained, although, as previously noted, the state of exhaustion still presents a difficult problem. There is a little more readiness to take nourishment and the local condition is progressing."

(Signed)
HEWETT
DAWSON

All five doctors were in Buckingham Palace before 10 o'clock but the bulletin was not issued until after 12:30, as a long consultation followed the examination of His Majesty.

Today was one of the coldest and most disagreeable so far this winter, but a considerable crowd was outside the palace anxious to learn the news from the royal bedside.

There was general gratification among the public that the king had had no setback and that the bulletin was not without satisfactory features, but public anxiety is bound to continue while the patient remains in the present state of extreme weakness.

Gay Celebration Here of New Year

The arrival of the New Year in Kingston and vicinity will be celebrated amid great levity according to the many events advertised to take place tonight.

Dinner parties, dances, movies, entertainments and watch night services will comprise the general celebration program. A number of big dances will be held in Kingston including the Elks' annual party at the Elks' Home on Fair street and the Knights of Columbus public dance at their building, Broadway and Andrew street. At the Stuyvesant Hotel there will be served supper in the main dining room from 10 to 12 o'clock with dancing and entertainment. At the Hotel Eichler there also will be a special program.

One of the biggest events of the evening will be held at Golden Rule Inn, Ulster Park, where besides the usual special dinner service there will be dancing to music by a New York orchestra with two big Metropolitan revues as a special feature. From the number of reservations made a record crowd is expected. At Mino's, Lake Katrine, a full course steak dinner will be served. There will also be entertainers. A chicken supper and dance will be held at the Ruby Hotel and there will be a dance at Firemen's Hall, Eddyville.

At the Broadway and Orpheum Theatres there will be midnight shows starting at 11 o'clock.

Albany Inaugural Will Be Broadcast

Word Picture of Governor Roosevelt's Induction Into Office to Precede Actual Ceremony—Governor to Take Oath on Family Bible.

Albany, Dec. 31.—The entire inauguration ceremony, as it takes place at the State Capitol on New Year's noon will be broadcast with Chris Grant, of the Department of State, at the microphone. This will be the third inauguration to be handled over the air by Mr. Grant. On the coming occasion he will be introduced by Norman Sweetser of the National Broadcasting Company. Broadcasting will get under way at 12 o'clock and during the ten or fifteen minutes that follow, Mr. Grant will give a word picture of the affair, making it much easier for his listeners to visualize the entire ceremony. It is expected that the inauguration will be over by one o'clock. Retiring Governor Smith does not intend to speak at any great length as he introduces Governor-elect Roosevelt, who in turn will confine his inaugural address to a matter of about 2,000 words. The hookup includes WEAF, WGY, and other stations.

Everything is in readiness for the inauguration. Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt will arrive in town late Monday afternoon. Many others will also reach town from distant points. At least six different states will have representatives present for the inauguration, while New York city will send a large crowd. Tens of thousands, however, will sit in their own homes and follow the whole proceedings over the radio. Arrangements have been made for loud speakers in the Senate Chamber, and in front of the Capitol, to handle any overflow.

When Governor Roosevelt takes the oath of office, he will place his hand on a Bible that has been in the Roosevelt family for nearly two centuries, and which will be brought to Albany by Mrs. Roosevelt today. A delegation of at least sixty persons from Hyde Park, Roosevelt's home town, will come by bus to Albany and participate in the military parade and will later be accorded a section of honor in the inaugural chamber.

300 Arrested in Anti-Crime Drive

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—After another week-end round up in Commissioner Whalen's anti-crime campaign, 300 suspects were in jail today.

Six men wanted for homicide, one accused as a counterfeiter and a mail robbery suspect were said by police to be the most important catches. Others faced larceny, felonious assault, pocket picking and lesser charges.

Raids on speakeasies and other hangouts of undesirables and suspects were begun by detectives before sundown Saturday and continued all night and through a large part of yesterday. In all but a few cases magsitrates ordered those arrested held without bail.

Commissioner Whalen, who was active all day yesterday in connection with the roundup, made a personal inspection of the Brooklyn sector after going to the scene of two bomb explosions in that borough.

One of the bombs was exploded at the doorstep of a paper dealer and the other in front of a bakery. Nobody was hurt and only small property damage was done. The paper dealer and the baker both blamed personal enemies.

Raids to carry out his order, issued the day he took office, that "crime-breeding speakeasies" must go, will be continued, the commissioner said.

Licenses of Three Drivers Revoked

Three residents of Ulster county and nearby vicinity had their licenses to drive automobiles revoked by Charles A. Harnett, commissioner of motor vehicles, during the two weeks ended December 22. In the state there were 874 certificates of automobile registration and licenses revoked or suspended.

Elvin D. Chipp of 128 Clinton avenue was charged with driving a car while intoxicated.

William P. Marshall, R. F. D., Rhinebeck was charged with reckless driving.

Thomas Nardone of Highland was charged with false statement in application.

MAY TRY TO SALVAGE LINER CELTIC IN PARTS.

Cobh, Irish Free State, Dec. 31 (AP).—The liner Celtic having survived the stress of sea and weather, experts today were considering the problem of salvaging her in parts. There was no prospect of hauling the liner off the Cow and Calf rocks, on which she grounded three weeks ago, but it was believed it would be possible to cut her in two or three sections and tow each into the harbor.

Plans were being rushed to carry out this project and with the continuance of fine weather the liner may be carved up successfully.

Wicks and to Assemblyman Millard Davis, with request that they use their influence that such legislation be passed by the legislature at its annual session.

The Ulster county board of supervisors concluded its annual session Saturday afternoon and following the completion of the business the annual supervisors' banquet was held that evening at the Hotel Stuyvesant. Over 200 members of the Supervisors' Association, present supervisors, past supervisors, future supervisors, county officials and just plain folks attended the dinner and all joined in having a good time.

The dinner was preceded by a reception held in the hotel parlors and practically everyone joined in the hospitality extended by the committee in charge of the affair. A most excellent turkey dinner was served and although the dining room was somewhat overtaxed the service was most satisfactory under the direction of Mr. Lynch, manager of service, and Harry A. Trimm, president and manager of the hotel.

Throughout the dinner there were musical selections, both instrumental and vocal, and Paul Zucca as usual led the singing with the assistance of Millard Davis, assemblyman and president of the Ulster County Farm Bureau who in the absence of Hal M. Eppes is the official Farm Bureau song leader when that body meets in a social way. From time to time there were impromptu solos, duets, trios and quartettes in action in various parts of the room but the trio led by ex-Mayor Crane was without an exception the best and several suggested that this trio be permitted to broadcast at some future date so that the public might enjoy a rare treat.

Another Perley Morse.

Following the serving of the coffee Robert G. Groves, county attorney, who acted as toastmaster, called on Perley Morse, not Perley Morse of Ulster county but of New York city. Mr. Morse in a witty manner stated that he had been enjoying a most unusual evening thus far, for wherever he had been introduced to any person as Perley Morse there had been a peculiar look on the person's face and he had just learned why. It was because there was also a Perley Morse who presided over the Indian Valley Inn at Kerhonkson in this county, and he assured his audience that he was not our Perley Morse but an entirely different one. Mr. Morse continued in a witty manner to speak for a time and frequently injected some serious thought in the talk.

Praises Philip Elting.

Modesty, he said, was not a characteristic of Ulster county folks, but there was one man in Ulster county who was most modest, at least in New York city. That is Philip Elting who is a friend of everyone in the big city where he now holds a most important office. Mr. Morse predicted that had it not been for his extreme modesty Mr. Elting would have been the candidate for governor of New York state last fall and he also predicted that had Mr. Elting been the candidate he would have been elected and it was only his extreme modesty which kept him from the nomination. Being closely associated with leaders in New York city, Mr. Morse said he was in a position to know that everyone in New York city was the friend of Philip Elting, and what was in store two years from now for Mr. Elting the speaker declined to say.

Thinks Supervisors Underpaid.

Returning to his humorous strain, Mr. Morse said he was surprised to learn that such a prosperous county as Ulster paid such a small stipend to its supervisors. In Rockland county, he said, where he resided, the supervisors were paid $2,000 a year and "pickings." There they were building a new $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 court house in a town of 500 inhabitants and his county could now boast of a much larger bonded indebtedness also than Ulster county, which had cut its debt to less than $100,000.

The speaker in his humorous way took credit for the present fine museum which has been erected at the Senate House grounds. During a visit to Judge Alton B. Parker's home at Esopus some time ago he was being shown the fine collection of things which Judge Parker had in his library. At that time he told Judge Parker that these things should be placed in some public place where the public might enjoy them. To this suggestion the judge replied that it was a good thought. Now, Mr. Morse said, he was told that $10,000 had been provided in the will of Judge Parker toward a museum where the collection might be placed. Then through the efforts of Mrs. Parker, who had gone to Governor Smith, an appropriation of $90,000 had been secured and the museum was now complete.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press).

London—As a thank offering for his escape in a motor car accident, Lord Beaverbrook, newspaper magnate, will distribute £25,000 to worthy causes.

Sylvania, Ga.—After 58 years in the public service, the Rev. H. J. Arnett, 80, Baptist, is retiring as county commissioner of public schools. He will continue to preach to four churches, once a month in each.

New York—Adolph Lewisohn, copper magnate and philanthropist, disagrees with Henry Ford. He feels saving is just as important a part of success as spending for self-improvement. He has ten points for young men who would rise: Work and earn; make a budget; record expenditures; have a bank account; carry life insurance; own your own home; make a will; invest in safe securities; pay bills promptly; share with others.

Hyde Park, N. Y.—Franklin D. Roosevelt is to take the oath of office as governor at Albany tomorrow on a family bible which is more than 237 years old. The first entry on the fly leaf notes the birth in 1691 of Jacobus Roosevelt, Franklin's great great great grandfather.

New York—Betty Wilson, swimming instructor, who won $500 by talking 97 hours, says she knows no easier way to make that amount of money. She shared first prize with one Howard Williams in an endurance gabfest.

New York—Belated revelations as to the De Vos-Hudkins fight last week say that Tony Biddle arranged for millionaires to usher socially prominent persons to ringside seats in Madison Square Garden. Women on arriving were handed baby blue slips. Typical ones: "Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt will be escorted by Mr. William Rhinelander Stewart, Jr." "Will Mr. Malcolm Meacham kindly accompany Princess Francesca Rospigliosi?"

WEST SHOKAN

West Shokan, Dec. 31—The many friends in this locality greatly regret to learn of the total loss by fire on Christmas night of the Pocantico Inn and Sanitarium at Margaretville owned by William G. Walsh, who is well known here.

The Beesmer house at Broadhead is catering to a number of city visitors, this well known resort being a place for both summer and winter guests.

Mrs. James Burgher, the village seamstress, is rushed with work.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle McRoberts and family started on Wednesday morning for the return trip to Detroit after spending Christmas at Tuckaway Farm.

Judge and Mrs Fred L. Weidner were business callers in Kingston on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Beggs and family of Boiceville were visitors at West Shokan Heights on Thursday.

William Jordan of Brodhead was a visitor with friends here recently.

E. C. Davis and daughters, Marion and Cornelia, made a business trip to Kingston on Thursday.

Judge David L. Windrum of Shokan accompanied by his aunt, Mrs. Grier, were entertained on Christmas at the home of Judge and Mrs. F. L. Weidner where the spirit of Christmas was made manifest

"Bert" Winnie of the Cold Brook garage accompanied by his father, former congenial mail carrier, William Winnie, made a business trip to Kingston. "Bert," despite his manifold duties, has from a boy been a successful trapper and every year finds time to pinch the toes of a few wily minks, he having taken two fine specimens so far this season.

Egbert Boice of Watson Hollow made a business trip to Kingston on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Olmstead and daughter, Esther, of Shandaken, are making a vacation visit with relatives in Orange county. After their return the abode for the remainder of the winter will be at the Hoarden Villa which is situated near the sparkling waters of Lake Winkler, whereby Mrs. Olmstead may be in close proximity to the Bushkill school where she is employed as teacher.

Mr. Werbelowsky, of the firm of Myer & Werbelowsky, fur and cattle buyers of Kingston, made a business trip through this locality on Thursday of last week.

What a wonderful mild day was Christmas. The close of day when the glory of the rising full moon of early evening cast its golden beam of light, like a highway of gold, across the rippling waters of the reservoir, will remain as a picture indelibly painted in the memory of those so fortunate as to view this work of the Master's hand, which those residing on the heights of the western shore were privileged to behold.

Professor and Mrs. Condon have returned after spending Christmas out of town.

The steam shovel of the state road contractor is digging away cleaning out the creek bed where the fill crosses the stream in the rear of the Secor property at Shokan.

Mr. and Mrs. Justin Bell and daughter of New York city are visiting relatives in this section. Mr. Bell holds a responsible position with the board of water supply.

Harry Votee of Kingston, who was formerly a Brodhead boy and has for a number of years been in the employ of Sam Bernstein & Co., is now a valued employe of the new J. C. Penney store on Wall street, where he is working his way up the ladder of success. His many friends wish him success in his new position.

A number of local parties are planning to watch the old year out and the new year in Monday night.

Harry Krom of Oneonta spent Christmas at the home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Vandemark, of Main street.

A number from this town attended the Christmas entertainment of the Methodist Sunday school at Tongore on Christmas eve.

Mr. and Mrs. John Warren and daughter, Julia, of Shokan were local visitors on Wednesday.

Elwyn Davis visited Uncle Jake Crispell at Shokan one day this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Early North, Mr. and Mrs. Earle North, Miss Maude Palen of Kingston, and Mose and Bob Palen of Ashokan were Christmas guests of Mr. and Mrs. Justus North at their home in Shokan.

A number of people in this section are sick, due largely perhaps to the unseasonable weather.

Ralph McRoberts, who had been vacationing with his parents and friends, has returned to his employment.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester S. Davis were entertained out of town on Christmas.

Charles and Lauren Hesley are sick, being scercely able to do the chores.

Mrs. John McRoberts was taken sick with the flu on Saturday. She is being attended by Doctor J. D. W. Dumond of Tongore.

The well equipped blacksmith and machine shop owned by John Bell of Brodhead was destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning, December 26. Mr. Bell had been shoeing one of his horses during the morning and on leaving the shop had carefully extinguished the fire in the forge. Evidently an escaping spark from the chimney had started a fire among materials stored in the overhead room of the building, as when the fire was discovered the building was a mass of flames. Nearby neighbors arrived promptly, however. Only a grindstone and a few small articles were saved from destruction. For a time it appeared that other nearby buildings were also doomed as the intense heat set fire to the dry grass and leaves, which spread with rapidity. It required quick action on the part of all present to extinguish it before greater damage resulted. The building and the many dollars worth of tools and equipment therein was a total loss as Mr. Bell carried no insurance.

The Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Ahrens and daughter, Grace, were entertained over Saturday night by Mr. and Mrs. James Burgher of the Maple Dell Farm.

Miss Gladys Vandemark will give a New Year's Eve party at Colange Hall, which will no doubt prove to be the outstanding social event of the gala holiday season.

Among those attending the wood chopping bee at Raymond Miller's at Brodhead on Friday were Abel Every, Jr., Francis Every, St. Clair and Asa Barnes, Marvin Vandemark, William Jones, John Bell, E. C. Davis, and Julian Eckert with his powerful team of horses. At 12:30 o'clock the dinner call was sounded when all adjourned to the farm house where a bounteous chicken dinner wwith all the trimmings was served by Mrs. Miller, assisted by Mrs. Justus Every, to which full justice was done by the hungry choppers. Mr. Miller wishes to extend his sincere thanks to all those who so willingly donated their services.

Donald and Robert Bishop returned from Hobart on Saturday after making a short visit with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. O'Connor, also their sister, Miss Olive Bishop, of Hobart.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Snyder and family returned home on Sunday after spending a week with relatives and friends in Brooklyn.

Election of officers of Ashokan I. O. O. F. Lodge took place on Saturday night. The installation, which will be private, will take place next Saturday evening, January 5.

Printed Velvet Used for Charming Negligee

The negligee illustrated may be developed as simply or as elegantly as you please. Negligees run pretty much to the same form year after year, but always they must defer to certain qualifications. They must be easy and comfortable, but they should also be a little exotic, a little more luxurious and feminine than anything else. Transparent printed velvet in soft color combinations bordered with finely plaited chiffon is effective in the negligee sketched.—Woman's Home Companion.

French Designers Busy Making Resort Outfits

Fashionable women making ready to spend the winter in Nice, Northern Africa and Palm Beach have swamped the couturiers to order the wardrobes they will wear in those fair climes, notes a Paris fashion correspondent in the Louisville Courier-Journal.

The two-piece jumper suit is still being worn popularly for actual sports purposes, while the trig, tailored frock of tweed, jersey or kasha has taken the place quite definitely for ordinary morning or country wear. These one-piece frocks are usually without trimming or ornamentation save in incrusted bands of the same material or rows of stitching tucks. Sports coats of the same color, with loose backs and ample sleeves and patch pockets and, usually, a fur collar, are worn with these simple frocks, as well as with the sweater and tweed skirt of the real sports costume. A short jacket on the order of the old-fashioned cardigan is shown with the two-piece sports costume designed for southern wear, which is often of the same material as the sweater.

Premet and Jenny have received many orders for afternoon frocks of printed velvet, while Martial et Armand, Lelong and Agnes are making numerous ones in georgette and the silk crepes, including crepe satin and the heavier crepe marocain, and there is very little change in the modes from those seen in the earlier collections. The slim silhouette is still retained in spite of the ruffles and frills and loose panels with which the skirts are adorned, all these furbelows being placed well below the hips, which are swathed in a deep, tight girdle or outlined by a tightly fitted yoke. The coats ordered for the South are elaborately trimmed with fur in many instances, and there is a marked tendency toward the redingote form, a revival of which was a distinct note in the midseason collections.

Coats of this type of Rodier tweed in tan, taupe or gray, with slightly flaring skirts and slightly pinched-in waists and with collars in astrakhan in the same color have proved to be one of the season's outstanding successes, and the same mode is being shown in lighter weight materials, though still with the collar of fur, for southern wear.

Slenderizing Prints by Combining Two Fabrics

Dresses combining two fabrics in the same print have a tendency to lessen the effect of too ample lines in the figure. Two differing patterns incline to accept any discrepancies in the gently curving lines of the desired, and not altogether unobtainable, reedy silhouette.

The vogue for matching prints, originated in Paris last spring, gives promise of importance as a future style factor. Vying with companion prints is the print over print where one design is superimposed over another.

Vegetable Colors Are Fashionable This Year

Tobacco brown, tomato red, artichoke green and eggplant purple are some of the shades of vegetable inspiration which are being worn. Tomato red is in jersey, kasha and wool mixtures. The browns are sport and street shades, and artichoke green is also a daytime color. But eggplant purple appears only in evening styles, usually in chiffon or transparent velvet.

Fish and Game Association.

The regular annual meeting of the Ulster County Fish and Game Protective Association will be held at the court house, Thursday, January 3, at 8 p. m. It is requested that every member be present and bring a new member.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Grace J. Austin.

"It won't be long now," remarked the president of a woman's club, "before all the women in the United States are coaxed into wearing red dresses." She had just come into a small auditorium where an illustrated garden talk was to be given. One of the leading garden lovers of the place entered the door, wearing an exquisite red velvet gown, and there were a number of other red gowns in the room, worn by those women who had come to pay tribute to the beauty of nature's colors. Not even Mrs. King Solomon in all her glory, nor even 700 Mrs. Solomons could ever attain gowns with such perfect color effects as were shown by this flower specialist.

Nevertheless, to come back to the text about red, Dame Fashion was greatly pleased the other day to read that an important fashion editor of Paris said, "Mademoiselle, to be well dressed, must have a red dress, a black dress and a beige dress; all other colors are optional—but these three are absolutely necessary." And what "mademoiselle" wears, it is quite likely that her mother or her married sister will wear, in America.

On that same chilly evening, when ragged clouds were scurrying around the sky, and if you tried to walk a block, you were blown along for two, some one remarked, "It will be cold enough for muffs in the morning." That word "muffs" seemed to linger in Dame Fashion's mind, and she gave the matter a little special attention.

Now that object, the muff, has had a queer history in recent years. About as regularly as the winter sun shines there have been fashion tidings to the effect that muffs were to have a revival—and still they have not revived, to any decided extent. Perhaps women are doing too many things, from driving cars down to transporting the family delicacies of food, to want meekly to fold the hands together inside a warm refuge, as their grandmothers did in times long ago.

There is a hint that a small one-hand muff may gain popularity. This is so planned that the modern active girl may slide it right up on her wrist when she wants it out of the way. That has a sort of a practical sound. Even in that coldest sport of skating, there should be a way for every pretty girl to have one hand kept warm, and the one-hand muff should surely be able to take care of the other.

Speaking of sports reminds Dame Fashion that if some one had wakened her suddenly out of sleep and demanded, "What is the essential for a plaited skirt?" she would probably have answered with eyes still shut, "Good pressing." This supposed essential has been grained into her since early childhood. And now here comes Paris declaring that "many successful frocks with plaits gain a soft feminine air by leaving the plaits unpressed." This is said to be adaptable to sports and afternoon gowns, but Dame Fashion would think an unpressed plait would need a label, "I am not a ruffle."

Talking of the popular ensembles, now considered and planned on every hand, there is still a new one to be reported. "Dame Fashion, you should see my new coat. It just matches my dog!"

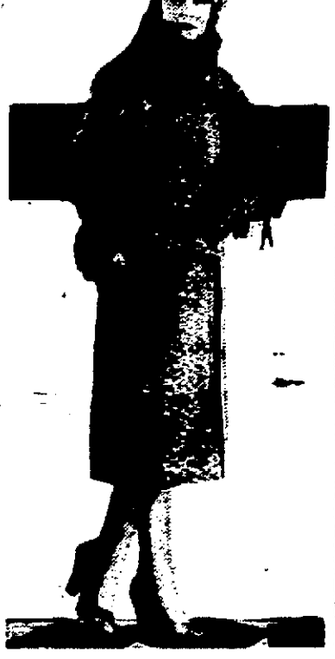
Black Wolf Trimming at Collar and Cuffs



Here is a charming tweed coat, part of an ensemble of three pieces. It is trimmed with black wolf at the collar and cuffs. Black stripes, the same as decorate the waist of the white-knitted jersey underneath, also outline the patch pockets of the coat. A white felt beret completes the outfit.

FOR THE NEW LOUNGING ROBE CHOOSE SATIN-BORDERED VOILE

BORDERED materials register among the elect for the coming season. Some little hint for an awakening enthusiasm for borders-to-be was given in quite a few printed silks during the past season. Paris especially exploited the bordered frock, but not to the extent we may expect for the coming months.

There is a distinctly new appeal in the lovely woolens with more or less elaborate borders, which are featured in advance fabric displays. The "last word" or rather the first word for fall is an ensemble which employs for the one-piece frock a tan woolen weave with a wide dotted border. The hemline emphasizes the bordering, and this same is utilized for trimming on the blouse and on the full-length tan coat.

Other handsome designs appear in the new materials, some of them showing a colorful tapestry effect. Tweed coats with wide colorful borders are among autumn promises. So insistent is the border theme becoming that even knitted togs are showing this influence. Unusual effects are attained which stress all-over repeat jacquard patternings for the body of the sweater, or coat or skirt as the case may be, or all three, their hemlines at the same time developing gorgeous borders which supply the rich coloring so in tune with the autumn landscape.

The flair for borders has also happily invaded the negligee field. Lovely sheer satin-bordered voiles, as this picture attests, make up most charmingly into lounging robes. With such a fabric in hand, it is an easy matter to fashion a boudoir coat as effective as the one in the picture, for the elaborate border forms its own trimming.

Printed satin for the lounging coat is a favorite. While bordered effects are smartly in fashion, they are not always a matter of the actual print, for many designers prefer to use all-over figured satin, edging it with a solid color which is seamed on by the fashionist. Considerable originality is displayed in these made borders, in that sometimes many colors of satin are sewed together forming a rainbow of hues, or perhaps a Roman border effect.

Hand-painted borders on negligees and lounging robes of solid tint are very effective. One need not be an artist in the professional sense of the word, for the amateur who cannot draw or sketch can easily stamp the design or have it done, if preferred. Before painting the stamped patterning, outline with gold and then fill in with the fast-dye paints used in batik work.

Bolivia Would Modify Protocol

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP).—Bolivian approval, "with slight modifications" of the proposed protocol for conciliation of its dispute with Paraguay was announced today by the Bolivian legation.

The legation said it was not informed by its government as to the nature of the modifications desired. The only announcement it received was that "the government of Bolivia has approved with slight modifications the draft protocol of conciliation of its dispute with Paraguay."

As soon as the Bolivian reply in full is received by the legation it will be forwarded to Secretary Kellogg as chairman of the Pan-American Arbitration Conference and to Dr. Victor Maurtua of Peru, chairman of the conference's special committee on the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute.

Since Paraguay already has indicated her endorsement of the same protocol, also with slight modifications, the special committee will have to try and reconcile the proposed amendments into a single document which will then become the actual protocol under whose terms the conciliation will be effected.

Two Children Burned to Death

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 31 (AP).—Two children were burned to death and their father was in a serious condition here today after a can of kerosene had exploded in the home of John Miller.

Jack Miller, 7, was showered with flaming oil when the can exploded as he poured oil on a fire in the kitchen stove. He died in a hospital soon afterward.

The father rushed downstairs, and tried to put out the fire, suffering burns which may cause his death. After 11 persons had escaped or been rescued, it was found that Mildred Miller, 4, still was in an upstairs room. Firemen fought their way through the flames and carried out the child, but she died a few minutes after being taken to a hospital.

Devotional Services Educational.

The devotional services held on Sunday night by the Senior Luther League at Trinity Lutheran Church were very interesting and educational. The topics for each Sunday offer wonderful opportunities to develop not only the heart, but also the mind, for the average church member has much to learn concerning the Bible, and also the doctrine and practice of his church.

Jewish Council Sends Greetings

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP).—The first exchange of New Year greetings between the Christian and Jewish faiths was completed today when the Synagogue Council of America sent a message to all members of the Protestant and Catholic Churches.

It was in response to a similar greeting sent last September by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America on the occasion of the Jewish New Year.

Issued over the signature of the council's chairman, the Rev. Dr. Abram Simon, the message said:

"To the members of the Protestant and Catholic Churches.

"The Synagogue Council of America finds in the beginning of our secular new year an excellent opportunity for the interchange of good wishes and for a brave determination to convert resolutions of good will into positive action and conduct. In extending to all of you its sincerest felicitations, it is most mindful of our common bond in the exaltation of America, its fear of God, its protection of the freedom of conscience and its respect for honest differences of opinion in religion. We cannot but see in them the fulfillment of the highest ideals of the religious groups of our country.

"With this feeling uppermost in our minds we join with you, brothers and sisters of this land, in praying that our country may always continue to be guided by these teachings of our fathers, and that through them it may remain a guiding light to the world."

Special Luggage Is Now Designed for Juveniles

Juvenile luggage is a specialty emphasized by both manufacturers and the shops.

It seems strange that the thing has not been pushed before—special luggage for hands and arms not strong and large enough to find the regular adult sizes convenient.

Of course, there have been some specially designed suitcases, but now there is a range of bags and boxes, trunks and cases almost as great for the juvenile as for the adult.

There are, of course, matching sets of luggage—hat box and suitcase and small wardrobe trunk. Or a leather or canvas roll with a square box to match, which seems to be the right idea for the young boy's luggage.

Very often color is chosen for juvenile luggage. Two shades of tan for the boy, two shades of green, red, violet or gray for the girl. But sometimes black patent leather is chosen, or one of the close-grained, sturdy black leathers in dull finish. There is nothing too somber for youth in the new black luggage. The color only adds smartness to the good lines.

Modern Corset Really Band Beginning at Waist

The corset as an article of stiffness is no longer in existence, and the modern counterpart is really a hip band beginning at the waistline and serving as an anchorage for garters. These come now in many different fabrics, some inset with lace, others trimmed with embroidery. A brassiere-corset de luxe consists of many rows of satin ribbon interlaced to form a solid garment. Brassieres for evening are cut to the belt line at the back, covering the bust in front and held by ribbons that are drawn over the shoulders to cross at the belt line behind and tie around the waist.

Pastors Disagree With Scientist

Only One in New York Agrees With Statement That Modern Science Demands Revision of Religion and New Concept of God.

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—New York pastors of various denominations, with one exception, raised a chorus of protest from their pulpits yesterday against the statement of Prof. Harry Emerson Barnes of Smith College that modern science demands a revision of religion and a new concept of God.

The one pastor who agreed with Prof. Barnes was John Hayes Holmes of the Community Church, who said "We should have a religion to fit our times."

Prof. Barnes made his plea for a new religious foundation in an address before a sectional meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which is in session here.

"We must cease talking of God," he said, "We must supplant theology by mental hygiene. Science has shown it to be difficult to prove the very existence of God."

Cardinal Hayes from the pulpit of St. Patrick's Cathedral said: "It is a fashion of the day to see conflict and contradiction between religion and science" but "true religion reverses true science, rejoicing in its unfolding of the beauties of nature because it makes manifest the omnipotent intelligence of God."

The Rev. Christian F. Reisner, Methodist, charged Professor Barnes with being "unfair, because he is not familiar with modern theology." "As well might I undertake to criticize science as for him to criticize theology," he continued, "with the evident ignorance in that field which he displays."

The Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Baptist, said: "It is the little minds in both camps who cause the most trouble. The foremost religious minds are becoming more scientific and the foremost scientific minds are becoming more religious."

The Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, Episcopal, said: "Science and religion are not at war, as the ill-informed think, but are cooperators for the general good of mankind. Science builds the machinery, Religion decides how it shall be used."

JUDGE ANDREWS ENDS CAREER ON HIGH COURT

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP).—Judge William S. Andrews of Syracuse, whose long career as a jurist draws to a close today with the adjournment of the court of appeals, will be honored by a testimonial dinner at a local hotel Saturday, in recognition of his services to the state.

Judge Irving G. Hubbs, elevated from supreme court to succeed Judge Andrews, will be co-guest of honor.

Judge Andrews became supreme court justice in 1900 and since his elevation to the court of appeals has served there continuously. His retirement leaves Syracuse without representation in the appeals court for the first time since 1870, when his father, the late Judge Charles Andrews, became a member of that body.

THE PRESIDENT'S RETREAT.

Mr. Coolidge's recent suggestion of the need of a near and quiet retreat for the President's family has not only received popular welcome but has already resulted in the introduction of several bills in Congress revealing in some cases inevitable local eagerness to make capital out of Presidential vacations. Mr. Beers of Pennsylvania is ready to champion a "summer residence" for the President, provided it can be located at Buena Vista in his State. Mr. Goff of West Virginia would have Congress appropriate half a million dollars for the purpose, but incorporates in the bill provision for the purchase of a site in his own State. With similar motives Mr. Taylor of Colorado proposes two summer White Houses, one in the Rockies of his neighborhood and the other in New England.

Of course all this is far from what Mr. Coolidge proposed. His idea was a quiet, unpretentious retreat near Washington to which the President and his family could go for week ends or short vacations and secure a real rest, away from official fuss and feathers as well as beyond reach of incessant calls and tireless importuners. A cooler atmosphere in summer would require such a retreat to be either in the mountains or at the shore, and nearness to the capital would require it to be in an adjoining State. But, above all, the need is for quiet, seclusion, rescue from publicity and from the pestering of either politicians, journalists or social climbers.

THIRSTY KANSAS SOLONS.

The new Governor of Kansas has determined that the legislative sessions during his administration shall be dry in fact as well as in theory. His announcement to that effect is said to have aroused lively interest in a State among the first to adopt prohibition laws, for it is stated that a non-drinking legislative session in Kansas would be an unheard-of "novelty". It seems that Governor-elect Reed summoned a conference at Topeka, denounced the former "long wet spells when the county commissioners and other public officials came in from the grass-root counties," and ordered the local hotel keepers, with ominous threats of having the law on them, to see to it that no liquor was served to politicians under their roofs.

This official admission of scandalous goings-on by Kansas solons in the past is accepted as a vindication by the editor of the Lyons (Kans.) Daily News. Long ago he ventured to declare that Kansas prohibition was a joke, pointing to the guzzling during legislative sessions, and once he was summoned to the capital by the Attorney General and sternly questioned. "A few newspapers backed us up," he writes, "but most of them inferred that we were lying"—to which reminiscence he now boldly adds: "The basements of the noble edifice erected by and for the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U. in Kansas are flooded, and all hands are too drunk to man the pumps." This is strong language, but, in view of the tell-tale words of Governor-elect Reed, the Attorney General will hardly summon the Lyons editor a second time. Meanwhile Kansans are said to be awaiting the outcome with keen interest and wondering if the thirsty solons for the "grass-root counties" can really be induced to make laws without the assistance of frequent alcoholic potations.

REAPPORTIONMENT.

At last, after more than seven years of delay, the House of Representatives may undertake this winter to reapportion its membership according to the census of 1920, and not wait until after the census of 1930, as had begun to appear likely although contrary to constitutional mandate. As it is said to be generally agreed that the already unwieldy membership of 435 shall not be increased, it will be necessary to base representation on a larger population than formerly, and this would result in reducing instead of increasing the membership from some States. In former times reapportionment every decade always increased the representation of growing States, and in some instances there may still be continuing increase, but in others there is likely to be decrease. It is stated that Massachusetts, for example, is booked to lose one of her 16 representatives and that Vermont is threatened with the loss of one of her two members.

Already there are four States, Delaware, Nevada, New Mexico and Wyoming, which, owing to their small population, have only one representative in the House, although each has two members in the Senate—a strange spectacle from the view of the historically uninformed—but under no arrangement can any one of these small States be deprived of its single member in the House, for the Constitution provides that each State shall have at least one representative there. The provision for two Senators from every State, however small, was a concession to the jealously maintained claim of State sovereignty by the original Thirteen—a concession without which the ratification of the Constitution could never have been brought about.

The lady who is about to organize a society for the prevention of noises is the subject of jocular comment, but the need of some sort of check upon the worst of the grating noises of this world is manifest, and here's hoping that she may at least in some small measure realize her benevolent dream.

LAZINESS OR TIREDNESS.

A salesman has two or three more calls to make, but feels a bit languid and so calls up his customers by telephone and endeavors to get their orders in this manner.

The office man begins to feel "all in" before the afternoon is half over and decides to have a smoke and read the paper.

What is the cause of this lack of energy, this lack of desire to work? In a great many cases it is due to constipation which is called the disease of civilization.

There is no question but that constipation, by allowing the blood to absorb waste matter—poison—from the intestine, is the cause of laziness and depression, and most of the headaches from which folks suffer.

And the trouble is that so many folks accept the situation as one that cannot be helped, and go about day after day with only about sixty to eighty per cent of their natural efficiency.

And yet as a matter of fact, as Dr. Thomas R. Brown of Johns Hopkins University says "The vast majority of cases of chronic constipation have no organic basis, represent careless habits of eating and living, and can be corrected by diet, exercise, and establishing a regular habit for the intestine, if the doctor be wise and persistent, and the patient cooperative and understanding.

"A morning dose of salt and water, or if preferred a fruit juice mixture, a bran cereal, bran or whole wheat bread, fruits and greens in abundance, prunes or grapes or an apple at night, exercise and exercises re-educating the patient's mental attitude casting out that devil of devils, the fear of auto-intoxication."

And where many sufferers make the mistake is in thinking that they are eating too much and eat sparingly, under the belief that they will have that much less waste or poison in lower intestine.

In addition to this they use enemas or irrigations up high in lower intestine to rid it of its "poisons."

Now enemas and irrigations may be needed at times and are wonderfully helpful in removing gas, but as they leave the intestine empty its muscular walls have nothing to contract against and simply don't contract, that's all.

The idea then is to eat sufficient food of the type mentioned by Dr. Brown and in addition to exercise the abdominal muscles by bending exercises.

T. B. Committee Asks Response

Conservation of time, energy and money causes the Ulster County Committee on Tuberculosis to urge all those who have not yet made returns to do so without further delay.

The more people who answer now, the fewer follow-up letters will be necessary. This will effect a considerable saving in postage and stationery and thus enable a larger proportion of the contribution to do actual work in tuberculosis prevention.

Numerous checks for one, two, five and ten dollars and many one dollar bills have come in, yet the records show that there are still a great many people who have as yet made no response to the appeal.

It is an easy matter to mislay the return envelope with the seals, so this year it is hoped that everyone will look on their desks, mantel papers on the reading table and behind the clock and send in their remittance or return the seals, so that we may know definitely the sum we can count on this year, and make the accounting which is required of us for the unsold seals.

If you do not want to buy a dollar's worth of seals, buy as many as you can afford.

Send in your remittance to Ulster County Committee on Tuberculosis, 207 Wall street, Kingston, N. Y.

1928 PASSES

Nineteen twenty-eight's dead;
Cold he lies beneath the stone.
Place a flower at his head.
But—Leave well enough alone:
Don't disturb a single bone.
Let all vain post-mortems cease—
Down the wind go roses blown—
Let the old year rest in peace.

Past and present can't be wed.
Vain it is to grieve or moan;
Face tomorrow's toil instead—
Never more the soul may own
Days and doings that have flown.
Each new dawn our needs increase,
Each new day new fields are sown—
Leave the yester-year in peace.

Good Friends:

For the moment let's lay aside the formalities of business and, figuratively speaking, give each other a not-too-gentle wham on the back and a hearty hand-clasp.

The loyalty of friends such as you, in our modest opinion, is the most cherished possession one could have, and we want you to know that your generous support, your friendship and your willingness to read our efforts to amuse you, have helped us greatly.

May we wish for you and yours a very successful new year—a year which we hope will bring to you all the good things that make living and working a worthwhile joy.

THE OFFICE CAT WRITER.

The burning question now before the nation is whether or not the Christmas tree can be gotten through the furnace door.

If you call a man's name the second time you meet him you'll make a hit with him.

Out of the Mouth of Babes.

Dr. X—, who is superintendent of the Sunday school in a small village, asked one of the boys this question:

"Andy, will you tell me what we must do in order to get to heaven?"

"We must die," said the boy.

"Very true," replied the doctor, "but tell me what we must do before we die."

"We must get sick," said Andy, "and send for you."

Thoughts, like love, also prefer to come unbidden.

Teacher—"What's a pauper?"
Abie—"The guy that married mommer."

Anyway they are not asking for federal aid to pave air routes.

Hey—"Aren't you wild about bathing beauties?"
Hay—"I don't know. I never bathed one."

The flapper's creed: "If your sweetie kisses you on the cheek, turn unto him the other also."

Shape isn't the only essential thing in a bathing beauty contest. There's brass.

Patient—"Do you think I'll get well, doctor?"
Doctor—"You have every chance. Nine out of every ten cases of this kind die. You're my tenth case: I've had nine others and they all died."

Those who saved daylight all summer can bring some of it out now and use it.

See Root of Idolstry in Worship of Trees

Today among some of the tribes of Africa there is to be found a form of tree worship where certain members of the tribe are said to acquire a very intimate communion with certain trees in the forest and to receive messages through them from another world. Nearly all nations have had at some time a sacred shrub, plant or tree, and appear to have been guilty of a species of idolatry in worshiping it. It is even conjectured that the adoration of idols sprang from this practice, the idol being made from the wood of the sacred tree.

It was the custom in the south of France to sprinkle wine over the Maypole at the annual ceremony of its uplifting. This, it is believed, was derived from the ancient practice of sprinkling wine over sacred trees. In England there is a mysterious reverance for the oak, though it may be traced in a measure to the use of its wood in the construction of ships.

The mistletoe, from growing upon the oak, partakes of a sacred character. It is considered that Isaiah alludes to this plant, which he makes symbolical of the Messiah. Our Christmas tree had its origin in Egypt. It was used long prior to the Christian era, at the time of the winter solstice, as a symbol of the ending of the year.

All women of the city are urged to attend this course. Prof. Bennett is an authority on his subjects and is thoroughly versed in the very latest thought and development of drama and poetry. The lectures will be held at 7 o'clock.

New Year's afternoon will be a very gay occasion at the Y. W. C. A. with the young people of the High School holding a tea dance from 3 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Tea and cake will be served, the music will be excellent and a happy time is promised to all who attend.

On Wednesday evening, December 19, the Springtown chapel gave the Sunday school their annual Christmas festival which was well attended by the scholars and their parents. A few of the children were missing on account of illness. The little white church was nicely decorated with holly and mistletoe. At the four corners of the chapel there were trees 13 feet high and in the pulpit was a tree beautifully decorated with assorted colored bulbs and fruits, blended with tinsel and other ornaments. Surrounding the pulpit were toys, wearing apparel and many other useful gifts which were presented to the children by Santa Claus. Miss Bertha Jansen of New Paltz, teacher of the Springtown school, was the master of ceremonies and for several weeks has given her spare time preparing the boys and girls in their recitals and songs to make the affair a success. She was well praised by the attendance for her activity. Santa Claus being so busy at this time could not come to Springtown so early he had Miss Jansen's brother, John Jansen, to act in his place, to distribute the numerous presents with candy, nuts and fruit. What a joyous and jolly crowd of boys and girls they were when Santa got on the job. One old farmer remarked, "I wish I was a boy again." In behalf of the Ladies' Aid, the Rev. Edwin and Mrs. Miner of New Paltz Reformed Church, also of Springtown Chapel were presented with a box containing a household linen set beautifully embroidered and all hand made by the ladies. The school presented the pastor with a fine silk muffler. When all these presents were distributed a large box of candy was left at the schoolhouse door by some good Samaritan to be given to the children who did not attend Sunday school.

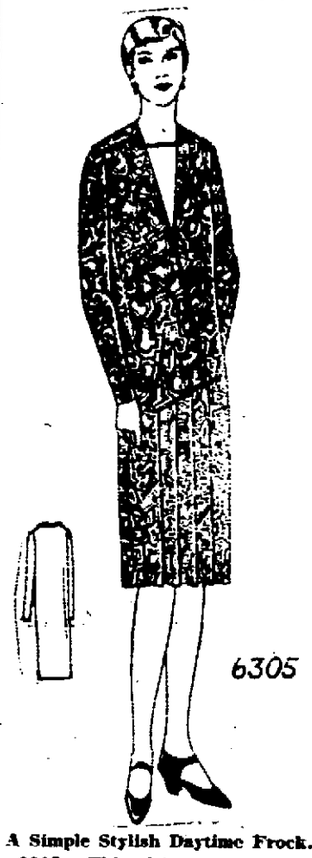
Battle Royal at Y New Year's Night

A basketball game, forecast to display championship calibre, will be played between the Chandlers and the Y's Men's quintet New Year's evening at the Y. M. C. A. court. Both teams, neither of which has suffered a defeat since their official season started, have a large following, so the "Y" gym is expected to be crowded with anxious fans.

Fox, Niles and Merritt, three high scorers, who are hard men to stop, will be ready to do their prettiest as forwards for the Chandlers. The Y's Men will have G. W. Kiss, coach of the Kingston High School varsity; McDowell, manager of the Chandlers, and Frank N. "Pop" Hinds, coach of the Chandlers, in the front court positions. At center the Chandlers will have Captain Ken Kennedy and Hank Krum. Both are well versed in defensive playing and their floor work is admirable. The Y's Men will depend on Shaeffer and McLane, two huskies for their pivot men. The three Joes, Hoffman, Blass and Dulin, will be in usual form to keep down the Y's Men's score. These Chandler players have displayed much ability in games played this season. The Y's Men pin great hopes on their guards, Flemings, Hendrickson and Rieman.

No official has been chosen for the game, but it is thought that "Dutch" Craw will handle the battle. Regardless of the referee, the game will hold plenty of interest. Many are eagerly awaiting the opening whistle and according to a goodly number the Y's Men will take the bacon. This team gave the Chandlers plenty of trouble in pre-season practice games and was able to outscore them.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.



A Simple Stylish Daytime Frock.

6305. This pictures a very smart style, with diagonal lines, and attractive plait fulness. The back extends over the shoulder in yoke effect, above the soft gathers of the fronts. The sleeve is a fitted one piece model. A vestee of contrasting material completes a very chic effect. Printed woolen was chosen in this instance. One could have Canton crepe, checked woolen or moire.

This pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size will require 3⅜ yards of 39 inch material. To face the vestee with contrasting material will require ¼ yard 9 inches wide. The width of the dress at the lower edge is 1¾ yard.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Fashion Book Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps to The Freeman for our up-to-date Fall and Winter 1928 Book of Fashions showing color plates, and containing 500 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Coats Show Tendency to Flare In One of Myriad of Ways.

New York—The woman who has let the holiday season go by before making a decision on her winter coat, has a good deal to be thankful for since excellent values are now being offered by the better class shops.

It is not unusual to pick up an original model at this time for a relatively modest sum. The latest advices concerning coats deal with the following facts: a definite widening at the hem and in some cases a lift of it at the front. There is much interest in flare treatments and while we are inclined to modify the rather drastic Parisian ideas, we are none the less influenced by them.

Even when the line of the coat is straight one gets an impression of either curves or angles from the collar or cuff treatments novelties being favored for these details. The correct line of the collar this year is high rather than wide. There is still a feeling for contrasting rather than self collars, the latter generally being confined to scarf effects, of which there are many.

The appearance of a sash tied always at the front seems to be justified because it contributes another way of controlling the flare. By either a sash or a belt, the hip line is tightened in such a way that godets may be added to the front without disturbing the smooth line which is the insistent and consistent note at the moment in dresses as well as coats.

Of This I Am Certain

Beginning with 1929 I will have electricity and gas bear the drudgery and burdens of housekeeping. It is unthinkable in this great era of inventive genius that I could allow any fatiguing manual toil in my home, which for a few cents an hour could be performed by modern electrical and gas household appliances.

Certainly, in the use of these tireless and faithful mechanical servants, there is left a greater freedom for recreation and an opportunity for a larger living.

Job's Many Troubles

Thus it is our daughters leave us,
Those we love and those who love us!

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

THERE are times when one wishes to serve something a little out of the ordinary. Here are a few for such occasions:

Celery and Artichoke Cocktail.

Mix equal parts of cubed artichoke hearts and celery hearts. The artichokes may be purchased in bottles. Serve with the following sauce: Beat one pint of tomato catsup and one-half pint of cream together. When thick and well blended add the juice of one-half a lemon and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Stir in the celery and artichokes and serve at once.

Creamed Chicken in Toast Patties.

Cut bread two and one-half inches thick and then cut into rounds. Hollow to form a cup. Brush with butter and brown under the gas flame. Fill with creamed chicken just before serving.

Mashed Potatoes, Peanut Butter.

Boil and mash one-half dozen medium-sized potatoes; add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of hot milk, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of peanut butter, one teaspoonful of salt and a little white pepper. Blend a tablespoonful each of peanut butter and dairy butter and spread over the top. Set into the oven to brown.

Blackeyed Susans.

Arrange sections of orange on lettuce with a fat stewed prune for the center and the orange as petals. A few raisins may be used in place of the prune. Serve with a good salad dressing.

Almond and Potato Balls.

Boil, mash and season as many potatoes as will be needed. Blanch one-half cupful of almonds, then chop fine and add three beaten eggs. Shape the potato into balls and roll in the egg and almond mixture. Fry until brown and serve at once.

mented the Supervisors' Association on its hospitality and the fine spirit which was back of the organization of such an association.

Davis Talks for Gas Tax.

Millard Davis, assemblyman from Ulster county, was called upon and in his talk came the first real serious thought of the evening, but one which was welcomed by the merry-makers. Mr. Davis in his usual abrupt and pointed manner came straight to the point. He said he wanted everyone to get back of the gasoline tax this winter and back up their assemblyman and senator and see that the tax bill was passed. There should be a gasoline tax provision with the additional provision that the money desired from the tax come back to the county to be devoted to roads and to help relieve the real property tax. Every measure should be taken in Albany this winter to relieve the real property tax situation. Hundreds of farmers, he said, were being driven from their farms each year through a high real property tax and the passing of a gasoline tax would be one step toward relief and he suggested that everyone get behind the proposition.

Favors Highway Change

In regard to highway construction and maintenance he stated that he saw no reason why the county should pay 35 per cent of the cost of construction in addition to securing rights of way for such main arteries of travel as the main highway on the west shore of the river. This type of highway was not a local proposition, he said, but was a state wide improvement. A large percentage of the cars which travel over this highway are cars from out of the state and but a small percentage of the travel is local. There should be some way devised for reimbursing the county for rights of way on such roads and he went so far as to suggest that in this age the state should maintain all of the roads as well as construct them.

Through a gasoline tax the man who rides will pay the cost and this will also mean that the man from another state who rides over our highways will also pay his share. Mr. Davis made it plain that he favored the gasoline tax with the return of the moneys derived from the tax to the counties for highway purposes.

Through the introduction of a resolution in the meeting of the board of supervisors Saturday afternoon placing that body on record as favoring the gas tax the first step of the county fathers toward that end has been taken. Mr. Davis approved of their action and complimented the board on its action.

Judge Cohalan Speaks

Judge Daniel J. Cohalan of New York city followed Mr. Davis. Born in Middletown, Mr. Cohalan came to Ulster county as a neighbor although at present he is regarded as a resident of New York city where he is engaged in the practice of law.

He stated that the assemblage was unique and unusual. It was most refreshing to come out to a place where everything was so informal and neighborly, where everyone apparently knew each other and where the spirit of friendly feeling was so plainly shown.

Debt Reduction Remarkable.

Ulster county, historic in so many respects, was a most unusual county from many viewpoints. In these days when practically every city, county and state is running up a big indebtedness it was most unusual to learn that in the past twenty-five years the debt of Ulster county has been reduced from about $1,000,000 to its present $60,000. This seemed almost impossible and he said it probably was due to the thrift of the people who perhaps took some of this spirit of thrift from the county of Ulster in Ireland, the name of which had been adopted here.

Honesty and Shrewdness in Wawarsing.

Referring to the old times in Ulster county when he was a lad and when he resided in Orange county he said he could recall even then there was a spirit of thrift and cunning in the county. He referred in a humorous way to the days when horse trading was in vogue. There had been a reputation among Ellenville folks which stood out even among the horse traders of Orange county who considered themselves experts. If an Orange county trader went into Ellenville with a horse, he said he was considered lucky if he came out of that shrewd town with anything. This knowledge of old times brought forth a smile from William S. Doyle and other old residents of the town of Wawarsing. However, in contrast to this story, he stated that even in horse trading in Wawarsing there was honesty. When a man came into the town from Orange county and went to Dick Elting, a relative of Philip Elting, and expressed his desires he was treated with the utmost honesty and fairness and got just what he wanted when he bought a horse. Honesty and shrewdness were two qualities which were combined in Ulster county folks and to excellent advantage.

Judge Cohalan said that he would in future when speaking on government use Ulster county as an example of the unusual in county government.

He spoke of the life of New York where one never knows his neighbor or what is going on next door. To Hoover's good will trip he also referred and stated that he believed that this trip was going to be followed by excellent results.

Getting Results In Government.

An expression of his belief that a one sided government was not the best also brought out some food for thought. By a two party government which was near the balance and where one party watched the other he believed the best results could be reached. A county or a community which was governed by one party which always held the power was not in the interest of good government and a community such as New York where the Democratic party held the power he believed was not the best. No community should be too strongly Republican or Democratic but rather in the balance. He stated that he believed the suggestion of Mr. Davis for a gasoline tax was a good one.

State Adds Costs to Counties.

Philip Elting was next called on. Mr. Elting said he believed that the county government was increasing because of the many additional costs placed on the counties by the state and one of these charges was highway construction and maintenance.

Mr. Trimm, manager of the hotel, was introduced and then after Henry E. DeWitt, clerk of the board of supervisors, had read the names of th members of the association who had died since the last meeting the entire audience stood for a moment in silent prayer and with the singing of America the banquet came to a close. Those who have died since the last meeting are: Peter Fox, Solomon P. Thorn, Philip Schantz, Eugene N. Patten, Lewis Frank Bennett and Albert Decker.

Sunday Fires Here.

The fire department was called out for four fires on Sunday. The first was for a chimney fire at the home of William Schroeder at 276 Second avenue. There was no damage. There was a still alarm for a grass fire off Maple streeet and a grass fire off Washington avenue. An alarm was turned in from Box 15 for a grass fire in the rear of the Cordts residence on Lindsley avenue.

Chandlers Drop Their First Game To Port Chester

After winning fifteen straight games this season the Chandlers went to their first defeat at the hands of Port Chester Saturday night at the latter's court. The Chandlers beat the same aggregation but a few weeks ago at the local "Y" court. The score was nip and tuck up until the last few minutes when the Port team rolled up a safe lead. By no means did the Chandler team display their usual brand of basketball. Their accurate pass work, which has always been the outstanding feature of their playing, was anything but the same at Port Chester. The final score was 41 to 32 in favor of Port Chester.

The Port Chester team at the end of the first quarter held the score by a good lead. The second period the Chandlers scored ten points while their opponents gathered 13. Although the locals were scoring more frequently, they would perhaps have been in the lead had they made the majority of their shots good. The Port Chester defense although strong couldn't seem to hold the Chandlers and the local "Y" team worked the ball under their own hoop many times, only to shoot and have the ball bound off the rim into the hands of a Port Chester man. The Chandlers defense was as effective as ever. They blocked more passes and stopped more men from shooting than they have in any other game. One big mistake the Chandlers made in the first was was they allowed the Port Chester defense to get set before they tried to work the ball under the basket. This delay was caused by the Chandler man who recovered the leather and failed to pass it down the court. When this was remedied it had a noticeable effect and brought the locals up close to their opponents' lead in the third quarter.

The First Period.

To start things off Goff and Foudy scored for Port Chester. After some time Kennedy caged a field followed by foul shots by Niles and Merritt. The score was now 4 all and things began to look as though it was going to be a closely contested game. Bracken made a shot from the fifteen foot line which broke the deadlock in favor of Port Chester, 5-4. This only gave Joe Hoffman the pleasure of making a field goal which put the Candlers in the lead for the first time, 6 to 5. Foudy, of the Port team, came through at the right time with a shot from scrimmage, giving the Chandlers the short end of a 7 to 6 score. From then on the Chandlers were behind. Goff made a field and a foul, Bracken also made a shot from the foul line and Foudy ended things up for the first period by sinking a deuce. The Port Chester team had not doubled the Chandler score at the end of the first half, 12 to 5.

Score at Half, 25-15.

In the second quarter the Chandlers although they scored more than they did in the first period failed to stop their opponents. Blass was the first to find the hoop in the second session. Following his score Foudy, Goff and Bracken each made a deuce and this collection of points was topped off by Krum, Kennedy, Fox and Merritt, who also made two pointers. It was very unusual that both teams should have their individual scoring periods, but so it happened that three or four men on each team scored in succession. The half ended with a 25 to 15 score in favor of Port Chester.

The beginning of the second half saw the Chandler's method of playing so improved that it looked as though a new team was on the floor. Merritt broke loose and made a cut in shot. He was fouled as he attempted to score and made good the free shot. Merritt again scored which cut down the Port Chester lead to five points. From then on the Chandlers kept within striking distance of their opponents lead. Niles and Hoffman were the two last to score in the third quarter which ended with 27 to 21 in favor of Port Chester.

After cutting down a ten point lead to four points it looked as though they would come from behind as they did in previous battles. In the early part of the last quarter the Chandlers kept very close to the Port team's lead but as time went on the winners again took up the lead by a safe margin. The final whistle blew with the score, Port Chester, 41; Chandlers, 32.

Flat and Curly Pelts Favored for Sportswear

Aside from pony skin, the main interest in sports pelts seems focused upon all the flat and curly pelts. Caracul, shaved lamb, broadtail, et cetera—these are fashioned in 1,000 different ways. Nor must one omit to mention in this connection the imitations of broadtail which are so often chosen by the Paris creators. For example, Molyneux has sent us a delightful sports ensemble corporating as its leading theme a short box jacket of cloth made to imitate broadtail. This is worn over a frock of wool crepe in the same tone as the near-fur jacket.

Junior Sunday School League

The Presbyterian A team was defeated by Clinton Avenue in a hard fought battle, 19 to 7, and St. John's swamped the Presbyterian B team, 27 to 8 in Junior Sunday School League games played at the Y. M. C. A. court Saturday afternoon. In the first game although Clinton Avenue had the lead by a big margin, the Presbyterians came up and made an interesting game out of it before the finish. The Presbyterian B team was outplayed by St. John's in their contest which was the second of the afternoon. At half time the score was in favor of St. John's, 12 to 4. In the second half the Presbyterian team was held to the same number of points while St. John's more than doubled their score.

Misses Guess

When the Southern California Trojans trounced Notre Dame's eleven, Coach Knute Rockne lost his perfect percentage as a prophet.

At the start of the season, Rockne predicted his team would lose three games this season, but the Trojans made it four. The others to triumph over Notre Dame this season were Wisconsin, Georgia Tech and Carnegie Tech.

ILLINI TO LEAD WAR ON BOOING

Director Huff Asks Cage Men to Mend Ways.

Praising the University of Illinois students for originating a campaign for better sportsmanship by spectators of athletic contests, especially basket ball, George Huff, director of physical welfare, vigorously denounced the growing tendency of Big Ten crowds to boo or hiss.

Booing and hissing of officials and other unsportsmanlike conduct by spectators at basket ball games at the various Big Ten universities have developed to such an extent that the directors of athletics of the conference feel the existence of basket ball as a Big Ten sport is threatened. This was revealed by directors in a letter which was mailed to every student in the university.

"In my opinion it is not only ungentlemanly and cowardly, but disgraceful, for a college man to boo or hiss, whether it is at an athletic contest or any other kind of entertainment," said Director Huff.

Conduct by crowds at basket ball apparently is the greatest problem, as Director Huff praised the Illini for sportsmanlike behavior at football games. Student leaders said that the campaign was inaugurated at Illinois, not because the situation in basket ball was any worse than in any other institutions, but because reform was needed everywhere.

The campaign reached its climax when a massmeeting, in charge of the student council, was held in the gymnasium annex with Russell Crane, captain elect of the football team, John Griffith, Big Ten commissioner, Director Huff and Vic Olander, assistant football coach, as speakers. An Illinois code of sportsmanship was adopted from suggestions made by various students.

"Our athletes, all in all, have maintained a high standard of sportsmanship on the field, and this movement is concerned with the conduct of our students in attendance at contests," said Director Huff. "I desire to compliment our students upon the good sportsmanship they have shown during the football season. But basket ball is home and our record last season was not as clean as to booing and hissing of officials. This was the case on other Big Ten fields in such an extent that the directors of athletics of the conference feel the welfare and even the very existence of basket ball as a Big Ten sport is menaced."

How Is Fast

One of the speediest players on the University of Illinois basket ball team is John D. How of Lakeville, Ind. He is 5 feet 11½ inches tall and plays forward.

Baseball Does Not Show Any Improvement to Fan

"I have watched baseball in both major leagues since 1907," writes J. R. B., in the Detroit News, "and I still have to be convinced that baseball today is as good as it was ten or fifteen years ago. I am now speaking of baseball and not a game of home runs with handcuffed ball players that can't use their other arm and hand as a sun shade in the outfield. You know what I mean.

"What would your major league teams of today give for a Lajoie, Weaver, Archer, Kling, Crawford, Evers, Collins, Schulte, Cobb, Tinker, Hoffman, Barry, Jackson, Speaker, and a few others in their prime? No team has more than one and at the outside two, who resemble the great players of a few years back. Travis Jackson of the New York Giants, Mickey Cochrane of the Philadelphia Athletics, Tony Lazzeri of the New York Yankees, and a few others seem to be out there because they like to be there and not merely because their presence on the field is a means to a financial end."

CONGREGATIONAL FIVE AFTER GAMES WITH LOCALS

Standings in Bowling Leagues

League standings in the various circuits sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. show that some of the alley sport followers have been dumping the maples in an accomplished manner during the 1928 portion of the bowling season, while others will have to stick closer to practice if they wish to become pinmen of note during the oncoming year of '29.

Ford Machines to Work6Days,Men5

Detroit, Dec. 31 (AP).—Announcement by the Ford Motor Company of a plan to employe 20,000 additional men so its factories can be placed on a basis of "six days for machines and five days for men", is believed here to presage not only the 20 per cent increase in production which is promised immediately but another social welfare experiment by Henry Ford.

While the plan is designed primarily to remedy the economic defects of his most notable innovation along that line, the five-day week, it is believed he hopes with an increased production to abolish permanently all night work.

Employment of the great additional force planned will be completed by March 1, the announcement said, and production of the model A Ford will be increased from 33,500 a week to 40,200.

Only the factory here will be affected immediately, but it is understood assembly plants in other cities will operate on the same plan when production has increased sufficiently.

The announcement warned that the unemployed of Detroit would receive first consideration and that men unable to show a record of previous employment would find little opportunity for employment at the Ford plant.

ACTIVITIES THIS WEEK AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

More Elegance in Evening Fashions

Apparel for Formal Wear Elaborate, Different, Authority Says.

It is in the evening gowns, according to a fashion authority at Paris, that the new styles most fully illustrate the return of "elaborate elegance." This, in the modern version, is based on "beauty of movement and line, on exquisiteness of color and material and on perfection of design," and is a quite different ideal from that of the "elaborate elegance" of old. That, as we view style today, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, was overelaboration, while the test of up-to-date smartness is restraint, refinement and finely balanced scheme in form and color.

That sophisticated simplicity of which much is heard is evident in the styles for the younger set. The winter mode as a whole is both sophisticated and extremely elegant. To begin with, the gowns are made very long at the back, in keeping with the renaissance of the train. This length is emphasized in some models with drapery at the side, which is considerably fuller than last season. This style leads in some models to eccentric arrangement, with a definite train coming out at an angle, sometimes at one side of the gown. This latest fancy, however, is regarded as rather freakish by the best houses and has had little response among fashionable Americans.

A point that is emphasized in all of the latest styles, most of all in evening dress, is the flat hipline. In gowns of rich material—brocade, metallic cloth, moire and the printed velvets—the goods is seamed, to fit plain about the hips. When soft or lighter fabrics are used, some clever ways of achieving the flat effect are shown. This, in some important costumes just come from Paris, is done with vertical tucks that mold the gown to the figure and help to create fullness in panels and trains.

Use Canary Velvet.

One of the most striking evening gowns seen this season comes from Worth, who uses deep canary velvet, draping it, Egyptian fashion, in front. The velvet is made into long panels, which are fitted with vertical tucks over the hips and form a train at the back. The skirt is short in front but touches a point several inches below that of last year's styles; and as with all of the evening gowns of uneven hemline, slashed skirt and long drapery, an underskirt is worn. This is made of taffeta, ninon, chiffon and lace and is taken to be a part of the costume.

A beautiful gown of pale green velvet of the lustrous noncrushable weave is made after a model from Madeleine des Ulmes in princess style, the velvet being tucked in diagonal lines to fit snugly over the hips and very full at the sides and back, ending in a wide, short train. In front the skirt is cut with one side overlapping the other, giving an unusually abbreviated effect in the middle front, where it opens over a dainty underskirt. This is made of pale green chiffon and ivory lace lightly beaded with tiny rhinestones. This sparkling touch repeats the trimming on the decollete bodice, which is cut in a deep V, back and front. The edge is outlined with a single row of rhinestones and has at one side of the waistline a large motif of the stones sewn on.

Other slips and underskirts shown with gowns of handsome fabric suggest the return of frills and furbelows with their many little ruffles, plaitings, entre-deux and edgings of lace and ribbon bows. A skirt style always chic is one in which sheer lace-edged material is used either accordion-plaited or side-plaited.

Waistline Creeping Up.

That the waistline in gowns, particularly in evening gowns, is creeping up to its natural position is illustrated in late models from some of the best houses in Paris, reproduced by a few of the fashionable modistes on this side. Chernit is among the French designers who are making gowns and wraps of various types with a shorter waistline.

A dance frock of much charm is made by Chernit of stiff, flowered taffeta. It has a simple, sleeveless bodice that ends at the normal line, to which is attached a draped skirt made with the drapery caught up at different points, very bouffant and with a long end here and there. Bernard makes an uncommonly stylish evening gown of pale gray satin in two circular tiers flring without a wrinkle over the hips and joined to an absolutely plain bodice, which is sleeveless and square, with shoulder straps. A small piping marks the natural waistline. The skirt has the long back and is lifted in front to show the linings of silver tissue.

Worth's manner of marking the higher waistline is shown with a narrow ribbon of blue, black or metal drawn through a small strass buckle, making a single note quite apart from the entire costume. Poiret and Patou are both making some of their handsomest evening gowns with a defined waistline at the normal point.

Unadorned Chiffon Frock Is Favored for Dine and Dance Wear.

As a characteristic of the season's mode some of the handsomest costumes for evening emphasize the feeling for everything that is durable. The silks, satins and velvets that the best modistes put into their formal gowns and wraps are of the quality that was once recommended as being able to "stand alone." The same standard of durability is held for the afternoon and evening gowns of permanent moire, noncrushable velvet, crepe, maracain, orchid tissue indestructible voile, and even of a new tulle that may be handled in many ways and can withstand wear, tear and weather.

Many New Ideas.

Our passion for fancy dress at large balls and private dances abroad has brought out innumerable new ideas in evening dress, some of which have caught on instantly. One of these is a robe de style, as we now call it, of nattier blue moire, made with enormously wide skirts attached to a quaint, plain decollete bodice, which has a scarf of tulle draped from the shoulder on one side to the opposite hip, where it is tied in a large bow with streamers. The top of the waist, and the short, ruffled sleeve with which one armhole is finished—the other being sleeveless—are trimmed with a band of crystal and pearl passementerie. Another in green satin and silver has a long slightly fitted bodice and is trimmed with rows of narrow frills of yellow valenciennes lace, a particularly dainty and picturesque finish.

Bringing the evening mode up to the minute, Lucien Lelong makes an exceptionally stylish gown of permanent moire in a soft shade of rose, the skirt of which is cut in three graduated tiers. In the top tier the material is gathered into a cluster of loops at one side, where the softly ending bodice joins it, and fits plain over the hips, except at the back, where it lengthens to form a rippling panel that almost touches the floor. The lustrous quality and watered pattern of the moire require no trimming. The edges are finished with a piping of the same goods.

Louiseboulanger is presenting some of the most dashing costumes for evening shown in any of the late collections. She is using the handsomest fabrics, velvet, a stiffly woven taffeta, jacquard moire and a moire woven with metal thread. Her style of dip now lengthens into a train, and her bustle and panaier appear in several new arrangements. One of the very latest is made of this moire de luxe in which the pattern is traced with a silver thread on sea-green. The bodice is supple and tightly fitting, and the skirt, which is cut in two tiers in front, is drawn toward the back to be gathered in two very large rosettes, falling then in a straight, gathered panel to form a train. This model is crisp and formal and to some extent extreme.

Wheat was evidently intended to be mankind's chief food, for it will grow over a wider area of the earth's surface than any other plant. There are over 1,000 varieties, suitable to different climates and soils.

GILBERT RETURNING HOME. MAY CONSULT HOOVER

Paris, Dec. 31 (AP)—Seymour Parker Gilbert, agent general for reparations, was enroute to the United States aboard the liner Berengaria today. Presumably he will discuss the forthcoming revision of the Dawes plan while in America.

Although it was announced that his trip was primarily personal and that he would remain two or three weeks, it was generally assumed that Mr. Gilbert would meet Herbert Hoover and inform him of the latest developments and exchange ideas with him. Mr. Gilbert also might be consulted by the American State Department, but it has been said that he has resolutely refused to suggest the names of American experts to serve on the reparations revision committee.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—The stock market made marked progress on the last day of the year, more than a score of issues establishing last minute high records for 1928. A wide asortment of gains ran from 3 to 17 points.

Heavy accumulation of week-end buying orders started the session with an active opening in which a number of 10,000-share transactions were recorded. The ticker fell behind nearly 20 minutes during the morning, but began to catch up as trading slackened toward mid-day.

Call money renewed unchanged at 12 per cent and was in good supply at that level. The fact that the year-end credit strain appears to be passing without a more serious flurry in the call money market was a stimulus to bullish enthusiasm. The banks had strengthened their positions last week, and found practically no occasion for further calling of loans today.

A wave of "tax selling", which was expected to begin today, as sales, save those for cash, will carry over into 1929, was moderate and quickly absorbed in a rush to grab stocks at their present levels in expectation of heavy reinvestment demand resulting from the year-end interest and dividend disbursements.

There was little in the day's news to affect the market. A further increase in the price of export copper stimulated buying of copper shares. A stock exchange seat sold for $575,000, which is $15,000 over the last sale but $20,000 under the recent peak price.

By-products coke shot up about 17 points to a new high price, but lost about half its gain later. The buying of this issue was accompanied by stock split-up and merger rumors. Abraham and Straus mounted more than 14 points to a new peak, while Industrial Rayon and Rossia Insurance made 11-point gains.

General Motors was again carried across the 200-mark in a gain of more than 5 points, while St. Joseph lead, National Supply, International Telephone, Columbia Carbon, and Commonwealth Power mounted 5 to 8 points to new peaks.

A number of coppers, utilities and rails broke into new high ground. Bethlehem steel sold up more than 2 points to 87, a new top. The motors were generally in demand, in anticipation of the automobile show bullish demonstrations in this group.

Nine Dead of Flu In Watertown

Watertown, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP).—Nine deaths in this city during the week end were attributed to influenza or pneumonia resulting from influenza. Two deaths were from influenza and seven from pneumonia.

Local health authorities said 300 cases of influenza had been reported up to Saturday, but estimated there were probably 800 cases all told. The 300 cases were reported by four doctors.

At Carthage, short distance from here, pneumonia resulting from influenza had resulted in the death of a father and son. The wives of both men were seriously ill.

Roy Garner, 33, of Clare, died yesterday from pneumonia contracted while making arrangements for the funeral of his father, Albert Garner, of Carthage, who died of pneumonia a week ago. Mrs. Albert Garner and Mrs. Ray Garner both were reported critically ill with the same disease. Roy Garner is survived by his widow and four children.

WHAT IS IT LIKE ABOVE THE CLOUDS?

Above the clouds 'tis fine and bright
The sun shines cold and clear—
The clouds are down below. The sky
Seems very, very near.

Fur Trimming Is Much in Evidence

Collars and Cuffs Prominent Decorations on Winter Models.

The day of dressing to suit one's type is at hand, and this season presents by far the greatest assortment of coats created in the most varied line in order to meet all tastes. Of course there is a general effort to have a coat conform to the trend towards the feminine in feeling. There are also a few details to the newest coats which mark their newness as well as coats of straight and simple lines to appeal to the lover of simplicity in all things.

Just a few of the outstanding notes in chic are listed—not by any means in the order of their importance, but just as they occur to the busy shopper for coat chic.

Daytime coats are seen in broadcloth and late afternoon models in velvet. Black is a favorite color in these fabrics—and black trimmed with white fur creates a smart combination—as usual. Fox is a favored fur.

The flared effects in coats are achieving a marked popularity—due undoubtedly to the steadily increasing vogue of the tiered skirt. The uneven hemline in coats, too, are noted in the smartest models.

Fur is used luxuriously as a trimming. Fur borders are particularly smart. Furless cuffs are much in evidence, but there are also models which use a great amount of fur on cuffs which may also be detached and worn as a muff!

Fur collars come most strikingly into their own in winter models. The high, medici collar along with the shawl, scarf or square collar all are seen in furs of long-haired variety as well as those of flat pelts.

The luxurious cape collars are seen on many of the newest coats. They appear in the cloth material alone or richly bordered with fur all the way around. Fur cuffs when worn at all are larger than ever.

Colors which the season delights in are black, gray, brown, wine shades, blues and greens. Combinations of colors are extremely smart.

Paris Pays Attention to Formal Afternoon Gowns

The French designers have devoted more attention to the formal afternoon gowns this season than for some years, inspired, no doubt, by the unusual beauty of the materials given them. The lovely transparent velvets, now at the height of their vogue, are irresistible in their charm, whether the velvet be in the almost too popular black or in some other of the season's plain colors; or whether it be plaided or printed in one of the new small designs.

When one adds to the possibilities presented by these various phases of the velvet mode the further inspiration afforded by the beauty of the allover laces, by the sheen of the new broadcloths and the quaint stiffness of the heavier silks—peau de soie, moire and faille, all of which have been revived this winter—it is easy to understand why the afternoon gowns have multiplied in number in the Paris collections.

All Black Costume Is in Fashion Limelight

In the sum total of chic, black is not the least considerable factor. For, make no mistake, the all black costume has enjoyed from time immemorial a certain consideration. But in comparison with its present vogue all previous successes seem insignificant. Today poor old Hamlet might be compelled to take to bright red or savage purple, for he would find too many competitors among his scorned women folk. 'Tis not alone our inky cloak, mother, but our inky frock as well. Also, our equally inky furs. Remember, indeed, that some of the smartest of our winter wraps eschew any contrast of fur trimmings in favor of matching astrakhan, caracul, krimmer, shaved lamb, or pelts of that sort.

Tibetan Lamas

Lamas, according to Tibetan customs, are those monks who have become distinguished for wisdom and saintliness. Members of the higher orders are looked upon as reincarnations of departed saints.

New Serum May Cure Pneumonia

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP).—A pledge made by a New York millionaire to aid science in fighting pneumonia after his wife's death from the disease four years ago has resulted in the development of a serum that is expected to cut sharply into the death toll from the malady.

Dr. George W. McCoy, of the United States Public Health Service, who aided in the development of the serum, said that L. N. Littauer, millionaire glove manufacturer, of Gloversville, N. Y., resolved to do all he could to help conquer pneumonia after his wife's death and that funds he contributed aided materially in the development of the serum.

The new serum is based on one formerly in use but is said to be much more effective. It has had the approval of a number of physicians and physicians' organizations.

Stillman Flight Ends Suddenly

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP).—Mrs. James A. Stillman's, monoplane North Star took off at 12:14 o'clock this afternoon on a 2,500-mile non-stop flight to France Field, Canal Zone. The pilot is Oliver Leboutillier and the navigator Lewis A. Yancey.

Almost immediately after the plane had got in the air it was seen that there was trouble. Passing over Garden City, close to the field, observers saw that gasoline was being dumped and the plane was losing altitude. The pilot began a wide circle back toward the flying field. He landed at Mitchell Field at 12:17 p. m. A broken oil line was the cause of the trouble.

The plane had reached an altitude of about 400 feet over Garden City when the motor revolutions dropped from 1,800 to 1,100 a minute.

The return to the ground provided thrills for persons at Roosevelt, Mitchel and Curtiss Fields and hundreds of residents of the village of Hempstead, which the plane skimmed over before it landed. Leboutillier said he missed by inches the chimney of a Hempstead schoolhouse and stalled his motor to volplane over two houses for a landing. Meanwhile persons in the streets of Hempstead scurried to cover as the plane wobbled in its descent.

Two Used Flour Bags Will Make Bedspread

What kind of a bedspread is on your little girl's bed—a plain, uninteresting white one, easily soiled and rumpled, or a fascinating checkerboard one, with Mother Goose characters walking about on it, and which will stand plenty of pillow fights and hard wear?

The attractive spread shown here can be made for a dollar or even less, and has very little work in it, in proportion to its effectiveness. Two used flour bags, a yard and a half of checked gingham and a few skeins of embroidery cotton are the only materials required.

The flour bags are usually to be had from the baker for a few cents apiece. Pull out the chain stitching and then remove the stamping. The best way to do this is to soak the inked spots in kerosene or cover them with lard and let it stand overnight. Then wash the bags out in lukewarm water.

Cut one-half of one of the bags into 18 six-inch squares. On each of these work one of the nursery rhyme figures in simple outline stitch the same color as the gingham. Picked up in odd moments, it will take very little time to do.

Then cut out an equal number of squares of the checked material the same size and stitch the two sets of squares together in checkerboard fashion. Use the remaining bag and a half for lining the back. Finish the spread by putting a six-inch fold of the gingham all the way round.

There is no reason why an equally attractive spread may not be made in much the same way for adults. Make the squares seven inches instead of six and use a solid color chambray in place of the checked goods. Some quickly worked floral or conventional design is put in the center of the white squares, using coarse thread in outline, lazy-daisy or chain stitch and french knots.

This is a splendid gift for a shower or as a donation to a bazaar because the labor may be divided up by distributing the squares among the donors to be worked in spare moments.

Dry Skim Milk Is Found Good Addition to Bread

Science has taken a hand in making bread the real "staff of life."

Extensive laboratory studies and bakeshop experiments have rewarded investigators with a new type of bread. This bread differs from the ordinary bread in that it is made with dry skim milk. According to the scientific workers, the minerals of the milk solids make up for the deficiencies of the wheat elements lost in modern processes—modern bread's one big defect.

A scholarly exposition of the new type of bread was made in London recently before the World's Dairy congress, by Dr. H. E. Van Norman, internationally known dairy expert of Chicago.

"By supplementing the elements of the wheat and other ingredients in bread with those of milk, we are producing a bread that perfectly meets the nutritional requirements of the body," said Prof. Van Norman. "Dry skim milk is ideal for use in bakery goods, not only adding to the nourishing qualities but also improving their every characteristic, such as color, flavor and texture." Many of the better American bakeries, he said, are now baking this new type of bread.

"Science knows of no simpler, cheaper or more effective way to improve the quality of bread than to introduce milk solids into its composition. The proteins of the milk build strong muscles, the milk sugar not only supplies energy but also favors the growth of helpful bacteria in the intestinal tract, and the milk minerals furnish material for strong bones and teeth and aid in all bodily processes. Children need these important elements to promote growth and parents need them to help the system make repairs. Bread made with nonfat milk solids brings an abundance of food essentials needed by the body."

Figured Velvet Has Great Vogue in Paris

Figured velvets remain in good favor in Paris. Some of them look as if varicolored snow had fallen thickly on them. Tiny dots of every rainbow shade are sprinkled over a background of brown or blue.

The fact that figured fabrics are still smart is just another surprise of fashion. One would think, after a summer when every daughter of Eve arrayed herself in flowers and landscapes, modernistic triangles and other figures, that soft, plain surfaces would be preferred. But figured velvet has a great vogue.

Sports Duds Are in Great Demand

Sweaters and Skirts, Knitted Frocks, Cardigan Outfits Popular.

There is no season of the year when sports clothes exert so strong an appeal as in the chill days of early winter. The warmth of woolens and the colorful appeal of the dashing sports outfits make them unusually suitable for this season.

All sorts of combinations are seen in which sweaters of all weaves and designs are united in the common band of chic with skirts of either matching or contrasting colors. The knitted sweater with either woolen or silk skirt is an always smart combination. Skirts are generally plaited, and the wider the plait the smarter the skirt. Sweaters possess all sorts of variety and show many interesting features in collar, scarf and neck treatments. Diagonal stripes are extremely chic.

The cardigan outfit is decidedly successful. It calls for blouse and skirt of knitted goods and the accompanying jacket to make an interesting three-piece ensemble. Here colorful effects are desirable and the gayest shades of the season are introduced.

Knitted frocks and suits also possess a wide appeal. Their weaves are especially interesting this year and their lines, while stressing simplicity, also pay marked attention to the details which pronounce this season's smartest effects.

Alice White, motion picture player, featured in "Ritzy Rosie," has opportunity to display one of the smartest sweater outfits. A sport sweater of chenille weave woolen in two shades of gray and black with diagonal stripes effect is combined with a skirt of black plaited wool crepe. An unusual neck treatment is seen in the scarf, which swings back over the left shoulder, forming a collar. It hangs down on the right side in a tie stretcher, caught by a metal dog.

Market for Fruits And Vegetables

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—(State Department of Agriculture and Markets)—Florida strawberries were in better demand on the local wholesale district today and values strengthened slightly. Quart baskets peddled out at 70c-99c and pints at 22c-40c. Supplies were light.

Fresh green peas were in moderate receipt. Trading was more active and the market closed firmer at slightly higher prices. Crates of approximately 45 pounds from California realized $6.50-$7.50. Similar crates from Mexico brought $6.25-$7.

The market on southern new crop and late crop cabbage was stronger. State old crop held firm. Supplies were moderate. Jobbing sales on Western New York Danish cabbage in bulk were consummated at $45-$50 per ton. New crop Wakefield from Florida sold at $2-$2.50, and late crop from South Carolina at $1.75-$2.

Arrivals of upstate New York cut carrots were limited. Hundred-pound sacks of unwashed stock changed hands in carlots at $2.85 per sack. New crop bunched carrots from the west held steady. Crates of about 48 and 60 bunches wholesaled at $2-$3.75.

Receipts of cauliflower from California were moderate. The demand was less active and prices declined in a slightly weaker market. Most of the sales were reported at $1.50-$2, occasionally as high as $2.25 and as low as $1.

Supplies of Florida Big Boston lettuce and romaine were moderate. Fancy stock averaged higher, although the demand was only fair. Sales on the Big Boston lettuce were at $1-$2.50, principally $1.75-$2.25, per 1½ bushel hamper. Romaine brought $1.25-$2.

State celery in the rough was in light receipt. Offerings were fair and ordinary in quality and peddled out at $2.50-$3.25 per two-thirds crate. California celery also varied greatly and sales ranged from $4.50-$8 per large crate.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)
